

Marceli Lalik: “Design Speed” of Railway Vehicle

The article presents the analysis of regulations concerning the railway system interoperability within the European Union as well as documents resulting from these regulations' application in reference to the vehicle speed. The analysis reveals that the currently used “construction speed” should be replaced by the so called “design speed” in the Polish-language version of the documents that include technical parameters.

Keywords: railway transport, vehicle speed